3. For example, if you have 5,000 pages of reading to complete in a 16-week semester, then you would divide 5,000 by 112 (16 weeks is 112 days). But, let's say you want to have your reading completed in 13 weeks so you can have extra time to work on your final papers. Then, you would divide 5,000 by 91, which equals roughly 55. So, according to this plan, you could have all your reading done in 13 weeks by reading 55 pages a day.
