tract my prayer, condemn the president, and renounce my statement about how to reprioritize our political beliefs. I wouldn't, so he and his family left the church. I'm still saddened when I recall that incident, but our public Christian witness and the scriptural mandate, which includes the phrase "that we may live peaceful and quiet lives in all godliness and holiness" (1 Tim. 2:1–2), was greater than the idol he had made out of his hatred for the president.

8. Restructure what needs to be restructured

Quit fighting to keep your favorite ministry, method, or tradition alive. If it's not part of the solution, it's part of the problem.

9. Make disciples, not just converts

Converts join a club. Disciples start a movement.

Converts follow traditions. Disciples follow Jesus.

Converts change their minds. Disciples change their lives. And other people's lives.

10. Figure out why your congregation should survive

If your church disappeared tomorrow, what would really be lost? Yes, that's a hard question. It might even feel cruel and uncaring. But it's not. It's essential. Any
