

Table of Contents

1 Timothy

2 Timothy

THE MACARTHUR
NEW TESTAMENT
COMMENTARY

1 TIMOTHY

John MacArthur

MOODY PUBLISHERS/CHICAGO

Contents

CHAPTER	PAGE
Preface	vii
Introduction to the Pastoral Epistles	ix
1. A True Child in the Faith	1
2. How to Treat False Prophets	13
3. A Personal Testimony of God's Saving Grace	25
4. Fighting the Noble War	35
5. Delivered to Satan	47
6. Evangelistic Praying	57
7. God's Plan for Women in the Church	77
8. Called to Lead the Church	91
9. Qualities of a Godly Leader—part 1	101
10. Qualities of a Godly Leader—part 2	113
11. Called to Serve the Church	123
12. Conduct in the Church	133
13. Falling Away from the Faith	145
14. Qualities of an Excellent Minister—part 1	157
15. Qualities of an Excellent Minister—part 2	171
16. Confronting Sin in the Spiritual Family	183
17. The Care of Widows in the Church—part 1	193

18.	The Care of Widows in the Church—part 2	205
19.	Restoring Biblical Eldership	215
20.	The Conscientious Christian Employee	227
21.	The Pathology of False Teachers	237
22.	The Danger of Loving Money	247
23.	The Man of God—part 1	259
24.	The Man of God—part 2	269
25.	Handling Treasure	279
26.	Handling Truth	287
	Bibliography	295
	Index of Greek Words	297
	Index of Scripture	299
	Index of Subjects	308

A True Child in the Faith

1

Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus according to the commandment of God our Savior, and of Christ Jesus, who is our hope; to Timothy, my true child in the faith: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord. (1:1–2)

The supreme joy for any parent is to see their child grow into a mature, well-developed adult. For that they pray, labor, and hope. The same is true in the spiritual realm. There is no greater joy for a spiritual parent than to beget a true child in the faith and lead him to maturity.

Paul desired, as every Christian should, to reproduce in his spiritual children his virtues of Christlikeness. He sought to lead others to Christ, then nurture them to maturity, so they would then be able to repeat the same process. He describes that process through four generations in 2 Timothy 2:2, “The things which you have heard from me in the presence of many witnesses, these entrust to faithful men, who will be able to teach others also.” To so reproduce himself was a central goal in the apostle’s life.

The degree to which he was used by God in producing genuine spiritual children is astonishing. While many of his companions, such as Barnabas, Silas, John Mark, Apollos, and Luke were not his spiritual offspring, many others were. Dionysius, Damaris, Gaius, Sopater, Tychicus, Trophimus, Stephanas, Clement, Epaphras, the Corinthians (1 Cor. 4:15), and many others, including probably most of those mentioned in Romans 16, were in all likelihood the fruit of the apostle's evangelistic efforts. Some he reached personally, others were saved through his public preaching. Still others were reached indirectly through those Paul himself had reached.

Of all those who were saved before Paul met them, and those who were the fruit of his labors, only two does he call "true child in the faith." One is Titus (Titus 1:4), and the other is Timothy. That unique description was reserved for these key men in the apostle's life. Of the two, Timothy most reflected Paul. Paul wrote of him,

But I hope in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy to you shortly, so that I also may be encouraged when I learn of your condition. For I have no one else of kindred spirit who will genuinely be concerned for your welfare. For they all seek after their own interests, not those of Christ Jesus. But you know of his proven worth that he served with me in the furtherance of the gospel like a child serving his father. (Phil. 2:19–22)

For this reason I have sent to you Timothy, who is my beloved and faithful child in the Lord, and he will remind you of my ways which are in Christ, just as I teach everywhere in every church. (1 Cor. 4:17)

Timothy was Paul's protégé, his spiritual son, the most genuine reflection of the apostle.

This letter to Timothy (as well as the second one) is first and foremost a letter from one man in the ministry to another, from the beloved mentor to his most cherished pupil. We must therefore first understand it in terms of what was happening in the lives of Paul and Timothy, and the situation at Ephesus. Only then can we apply its truths to our own day.

THE AUTHOR

Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus according to the commandment of God our Savior, and of Christ Jesus, who is our hope; (1:1)

Paul is certainly a name familiar to any student of the New Testament. Paul (Paulus in Latin) was a common name in Cilicia, in which his home city of Tarsus was located. It means "little," or "small," and may be an indication that he was small from birth. He was not a man of striking stature or marked appearance. A second-century writer described him as “a man small of stature, with a bald head and crooked legs, in a good state of body, with eyebrows meeting and nose somewhat hooked, full of friendliness; for now he appeared like a man, and now he had the face of an angel” (cited by R. N. Longenecker, “Paul, The Apostle,” in Merrill C. Tenney, ed., The Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible [Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1977], 4:625). His demeaning opponents at Corinth said of him, “His letters are weighty and strong, but his personal presence is unimpressive, and his speech contemptible” (2 Cor. 10:10).

Whatever his physical stature may have been, his spiritual stature is unsurpassed. He was one of a kind in the history of redemption, responsible for the initial spread of the gospel message through the Gentile world.

This unique man was born into a Jewish family (Phil. 3:5), and held Roman citizenship (Acts 22:25–28). His Hebrew name was Saul, after the most prominent member of his tribe of Benjamin, King Saul. The New Testament refers to him as “Saul” until his first missionary journey (Acts 13:9), after which he is called “Paul.”

He had a traditional, orthodox upbringing. He described himself as “circumcised the eighth day, of the nation of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of Hebrews; as to the Law, a Pharisee” (Phil. 3:5). He was a fanatically committed, zealous devotee of Judaism. In Galatians 1:14, he described himself as “advancing in Judaism beyond many of my contemporaries among my countrymen, being more extremely zealous for my ancestral traditions.” His fiery zeal was seen in his willing participation in Stephen’s murder (Acts 8:1), and his subsequent persecution of the church (Acts 8:3; 9:1–2; 26:9–11).

He was on his way to Damascus to carry out further persecutions when his life was suddenly, dramatically changed forever. The risen, ascended, glorified Christ appeared to him and his terrified companions. All in a brief time, he was struck blind, saved, called to the ministry, and shortly afterward baptized (Acts 9:1–18). Following a period of solitary preparation in the Nabatean (Arabian) wilderness near Damascus, he returned to that city and began proclaiming the gospel. After his fearless preaching aroused the hostility of both the Jewish and Gentile leaders (Acts 9:22–25; 2 Cor. 11:32–33), he escaped and went to Jerusalem. The church in that city was naturally hesitant to accept the one who had persecuted them so violently. Eventually, through the efforts of Barnabas, Paul was accepted. He later became one of the pastors of the church at Antioch (Acts 13:1ff.). It was from that ministry that the Holy Spirit sent him to his life’s work as the apostle to the Gentiles (Acts 22:14–15; 26:16–18).

The verb apostellō, from which the noun apostolos (apostle) derives, means “to send off on a commission to do something as one’s personal representative, with credentials furnished” (Kenneth S. Wuest, The Pastoral Epistles in the Greek New Testament, vol. 2 of Word Studies in the Greek New Testament [Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1978], 22). We could translate apostolos as “envoy,” or “ambassador,” someone who goes on a mission bearing the credentials of the one who sent him.

An apostle in the New Testament was one sent to carry the gospel to sinners. In the broadest sense, many individuals were called apostles. Barnabas (Acts 14:14), Epaphroditus (Phil. 2:25), Andronicus and Junius (Rom. 16:7), and James the Lord’s brother (Gal. 1:19) all bore the title, though they were not among the twelve chosen by our Lord. They are what 2 Corinthians 8:23 calls “messengers [apostles] of the churches.”

In its more restricted and common New Testament usage, “apostle” refers to an apostle of Christ Jesus. Those apostles included the original twelve (with the deletion of Judas and the addition of Matthias after Judas’s defection) and Paul. In contrast to the apostles of the churches, these men were commissioned by Christ Himself. They were personally chosen by Him (cf. Luke 6:13; Acts 9:15), and learned the gospel from Him, not other men (cf. Gal. 1:11–12). The apostles of Christ were witnesses of His words, deeds, and especially His resurrection (Acts 1:21–22). Paul qualified on that count since he met the risen Christ on the way to Damascus, and on three other occasions (Acts 18:9–10; 22:17–18; 23:11).

Apostles of Christ were also gifted by the Holy Spirit to receive and impart divine truth. It was to them that Jesus said, “But the Helper, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in My name, He will teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said to you” (John 14:26). They also had the power to cast out demons and heal the sick, performing those signs, wonders, and miracles that constituted the “signs of a true apostle” (2 Cor. 12:12; cf. Heb. 2:3–4). According to Ephesians 2:20, they are the foundation upon which the rest of the church is built. The church from its birth studied “the apostles’ doctrine” (Acts 2:42).

The word order Christ Jesus, instead of the more usual “Jesus Christ,” is unique to Paul. “Christ Jesus” appears in only one place in the New Testament outside of Paul’s writings. That reference, Acts 24:24, occurs in Luke’s description of the apostle’s testimony to Felix and Drusilla. While Paul also uses the word order “Jesus Christ,” the other apostolic writers (Peter, James, and John) do so exclusively. A possible explanation is that the other apostles knew first the man Jesus, and only later understood that He was the divine Christ. On the other hand, Paul’s first exposure to Him was as the risen, glorified Christ.

It may seem unnecessary for Paul to emphasize his apostolic authority to Timothy, who certainly didn’t question it. Timothy, however, faced a difficult situation in Ephesus, and needed the full weight of Paul's apostolic authority backing him. This letter, as it was read and enforced in the church, would strengthen Timothy's hand.

The use of epitagē (commandment) instead of the more usual thelēma ("will") further stresses Paul's apostolic authority. Paul had a direct charge from God the Father and Jesus Christ to carry out his ministry. That mandate included the writing of this letter, which put on Timothy and the church a heavy burden to obey its injunctions. Epitagē refers to a royal command that is not negotiable, but mandatory. Paul, Timothy, and the congregation at Ephesus were all under orders from the Sovereign of the universe. Paul also may have chosen this stronger term because of the false teachers at Ephesus, who likely questioned his authority.

Paul's orders came from God our Savior and Christ Jesus, who is our hope. Someone has well said that Christianity is a religion of personal pronouns. We do not worship a distant, impersonal deity, but God our Savior and Christ Jesus our hope. By linking God the Father and Jesus Christ as the source of his divine commission, Paul alludes to the deity of Christ. Jesus frequently linked Himself with God the Father in the Gospels (cf. Matt. 11:27; John 5:17–18; 10:30; 17:1–5, 11, 21–22). Christ's deity may well have been under attack at Ephesus (cf. 1 Tim. 3:16).

God our Savior is a title that appears only in the Pastoral Epistles, though it has roots in the Old Testament (cf. Pss. 18:46; 25:5; 27:9; Mic. 7:7; Hab. 3:18). God is the deliverer from sin and its consequences; He is the source of salvation, and planned it from eternity (cf. 2 Thess. 2:13). The liberal notion that the God of the Old Testament is a wrathful, vengeful God whom the gentle, loving Christ placated is both false and blasphemous.

God the Father's plan for salvation was carried out by Christ Jesus, who is our hope. We have hope for the future because of what Christ has done in the past and is doing in the present. In Colossians 1:27 Paul says, "Christ in you, [is] the hope of glory." The apostle John wrote,

Beloved, now we are children of God, and it has not appeared as yet what we shall be. We know that, when He appears, we shall be like Him, because we shall see Him just as He is. And everyone who has this hope fixed on Him purifies himself, just as He is pure. (1 John 3:2–3)

There were no doubt some errorists in the Ephesian assembly trying to rob believers of salvation's hope. Paul responds by stressing both aspects of Christ's work (cf. 1:11, 14–17; 2:3; 4:10) as he writes to Timothy, so Timothy can confront such attacks.

THE RECIPIENT

to Timothy, my true child in the faith (1:2a)

The name Timothy means “one who honors God.” He was named by his mother and grandmother, Eunice and Lois, who were no doubt devout Jews before they became believers in the Lord Jesus. They taught Timothy the Scriptures from the time he was a child (2 Tim. 3:15). His father was a pagan Greek (Acts 16:1), and may well have been dead by this time. As the son of a Jewish mother and a Greek father, Timothy had credentials that gave him access to both cultures.

Timothy was Paul's disciple, friend, co-worker, and dear son spiritually. By the time 1 Timothy was written, he had been with Paul for about fifteen years as the apostle's constant companion. He remained behind in Berea with Silas after persecution forced Paul to leave for Athens (Acts 17:13–15), but later joined Paul there (cf. Acts 17:15). He was with Paul in Corinth (Acts 18:5), was sent by Paul into Macedonia (Acts 19:22), and accompanied him on his return trip to Jerusalem (Acts 20:4). He was with Paul when he wrote Romans (Rom. 16:21), 2 Corinthians (2 Cor. 1:1), Philippians (Phil. 1:1), Colossians (Col. 1:1), the Thessalonian epistles (1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 1:1), and Philemon (Philem. 1). He frequently served as Paul's troubleshooter, being sent by him to the churches at Corinth (1 Cor. 4:17), Thessalonica (1 Thess. 3:2), and Philippi (Phil. 2:19), and now Ephesus.

Gnēsios (true) refers to a legitimate child, one born in wedlock. It is the opposite of nothos, which means “bastard,” or “illegitimate child.” Timothy was a gnēsios child of Paul, while Demas was a nothos. Timothy's faith was genuine. The use of teknon (child) instead of huios (“son”) speaks of Paul's giving birth to Timothy spiritually. Since in the faith is anarthrous (lacking the definite article) in the Greek, it could be translated “in faith.” In that sense, Paul would be saying Timothy is his son in the sphere of faith. The NASB translation in the faith refers to the objective body of the Christian faith. Both senses are possible, and consistent with Paul's usage elsewhere.

The phrase true child in the faith gives insight into Timothy's character. Paul sets Timothy up as an example of what a true child in the faith is like. His authenticity is thus verified, and the Ephesian church called to follow his example. Five characteristics implied in this opening section marked Timothy as a true child in the faith. Examining them provides a brief overview of the epistle.

SAVING FAITH

It is obviously impossible to be a true child in the faith without experiencing divine salvation in Jesus Christ. Paul testifies throughout the epistle to the genuineness of Timothy's conversion. In 1:1–2, he suggests through the use of the plural pronouns that Timothy has the same God and the same Christ as he does (cf. 4:10). In 6:11, Paul calls him "you man of God," then exhorts him to "fight the good fight of faith; take hold of the eternal life to which you were called, and you made the good confession in the presence of many witnesses" (6:12). Timothy was not only called to eternal life by God, but also publicly professed his faith in Christ. Unmistakable affirmation of Timothy's salvation comes in 2 Timothy 1:5, where Paul speaks of his "sincere faith."

The circumstances of Timothy's conversion are not recorded in Scripture. It is likely connected, however, with the ministry of Paul and Barnabas in Lystra (Timothy's hometown) on the first missionary journey (Acts 14:6–23). After seeing Paul heal a lame man, the people decided he and Barnabas were gods, and attempted to sacrifice to them. Shortly afterward, however, some of Paul's Jewish opponents from nearby cities came and turned the crowds against him. They stoned Paul, dragged him out of the city, and left him for dead. Timothy, Eunice, and Lois must have been aware of those events, and may have been converted then. Timothy thus had a very dramatic introduction to Paul. When Paul revisited Lystra on his second missionary journey, he chose Timothy to minister with him.

Unfortunately, not all those associated with the church at Ephesus may have had genuine faith. Some may have questioned the deity of Christ, prompting Paul to write, "By common confession great is the mystery of godliness: He who was revealed in the flesh, was vindicated in the Spirit, beheld by angels, proclaimed among the nations, believed on in the world, taken up in glory" (3:16). No one who rejects Christ's deity can be saved. Our Lord said in John 8:24 that "unless you believe that I am He, you shall die in your sins." Salvation, according to Paul, comes from confessing Jesus as Lord and believing that God raised Him from the dead (Rom. 10:9). Evidently there were those in Ephesus not committed to those essential truths. Some, likely even among the leadership, were openly teaching false doctrine (1:3), the very thing Paul warned the Ephesian elders against (Acts 20:29–30). Such men had strayed from the truth, and had "turned aside to fruitless discussion" (1:6).

In chapter 4 Paul warns,

But the Spirit explicitly says that in later times some will fall away from the faith, paying attention to deceitful spirits and doctrines of demons, by means of the hypocrisy of liars seared in their own conscience as with a branding iron, men who forbid marriage and advocate abstaining from foods, which God has created to be gratefully shared in by those who believe and know the truth. (4:1–3)

Since the “later times” began with the coming of Christ (cf. 1 Peter 1:20), some in Ephesus fell short of true saving faith, believing instead demonic lies. They listened to hypocrites, with seared and deadened consciences, teaching a false asceticism.

According to 6:20–21, some at Ephesus had fallen prey to “worldly and empty chatter and the opposing arguments of what is falsely called ‘knowledge.’” As a result, they had “gone astray from the faith.” They had missed the mark regarding saving faith, and were lost.

Timothy’s genuine faith stood out in sharp contrast with the false faith of many at Ephesus.

CONTINUING OBEDIENCE

The New Testament teaches repeatedly that the hallmark of a true believer is a life-pattern of obedience. Our Lord said in John 14:15, “If you love Me, you will keep My commandments” (cf. vv. 21, 23). In John 8:31 He told those who had professed faith in Him, “If you abide in My word, then you are truly disciples of Mine.” Paul wrote in Ephesians 2:10, “We are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand, that we should walk in them.” Good works are not the grounds of salvation, but the evidence of it. As Martin Luther put it, “Good works do not make a good man, but a good man does good works” (“The Freedom of a Christian,” in John Dillenberger, ed., Martin Luther: Selections from His Writings [Garden City, N.Y.: Anchor Books, 1961], 69).

The pattern of Timothy’s life was obedience. When Paul returned to Lystra on his second missionary voyage, he found that Timothy was “well spoken of by the brethren who were in Lystra and Iconium” (Acts 16:2). Paul testified of Timothy’s loyal devotion in 4:6: “In pointing out these things to the brethren, you will be a good servant of Christ Jesus, constantly nourished on the words of the faith and of the sound doctrine which you have been following.”

Others at Ephesus did not have that pattern of continual obedience. In 1:19 Paul writes of those who, having rejected “faith and a good conscience,” had “suffered shipwreck in regard to their faith.” They had started on the right course, but had been lost before they reached safe harbor.

In chapter 5, Paul advises younger widows to remarry, because “some have already turned aside to follow Satan” (5:15). Such women exemplified the truth of 1 John 2:19, “They went out from us, but they were not really of us; for if they had been of us, they would have remained with us; but they went out, in order that it might be shown that they all are not of us.”

In chapter 6, Timothy was told to warn those who pursued riches that those who want to get rich fall into temptation and a snare and many foolish and harmful desires which plunge men into ruin and destruction. For the love of money is a root of all sorts of evil, and some by longing for it have wandered away from the faith, and pierced themselves with many a pang. (6:9–10)

Timothy’s unwavering obedience was truly “an example of those who believe” (4:12). He had been a persevering believer in a church riddled with defectors.

HUMBLE SERVICE

A true child in the faith is a servant. Paul described the conversion of the Thessalonians in these words, “you turned to God from idols to serve a living and true God” (1 Thess. 1:9). The Christian life is to be lived as a stewardship of service to the sovereign lordship of Jesus Christ. The disciples left everything to follow and serve Jesus. True salvation is marked by a servant’s heart.

Humble service characterized Timothy’s life. At Paul’s urging, he willingly remained in the difficult post at Ephesus (1:3). Although in his late teens or early twenties at the time, he endured circumcision to better serve with Paul (Acts 16:3). As already noted, he served Paul for many years, through difficult circumstances. No wonder, then, that Paul called him “my fellow worker” (Rom. 16:21). There is no higher praise.

There were others at Ephesus who were not interested in humble service. Paul warned in 3:6 against making a recent convert an elder because of the danger of pride. Apparently some in the Ephesian assembly sought leadership roles only to exalt themselves (1:6–7). Those elders marked by humble, diligent service were to be rewarded (5:17). Those who proudly continued in sin were to be publicly confronted (5:19–20). The false teachers at Ephesus were characterized by conceit, not humility (6:4).

Timothy's humble service made him a fitting heir to the unselfish, sacrificial apostle himself.

SOUND DOCTRINE

A true child in the faith will adhere to sound doctrine. Jesus said to the Pharisees, "He who is of God hears the words of God; for this reason you do not hear them, because you are not of God" (John 8:47). The early church devoted itself to the apostles' teaching (Acts 2:42).

Timothy was a student and a teacher of sound doctrine. He was "constantly nourished on the words of the faith and of the sound doctrine" which he had been following (4:6). Paul exhorted Timothy to teach the truths he had learned (4:11; 6:2), confident that Timothy was doctrinally sound.

Ephesus was plagued by false teachers. Some had turned aside from the truth to fruitless discussion (1:6). They presumed to be teachers of the law, though they did not understand it (1:7). Paul disciplined two of them, Hymenaeus and Alexander (1:20). Paul describes the false teaching at Ephesus as "worldly fables fit only for old women" (4:7), "disputes about words, out of which arise envy, strife, abusive language, evil suspicions" (6:4). Its perpetrators were conceited and understood nothing (6:4).

In contrast to the false teachers, Paul was confident of Timothy's orthodoxy. He trusted Timothy to "give attention to the public reading of Scripture, to exhortation and teaching" until he arrived in Ephesus (4:13).

COURAGEOUS CONVICTION

Those who make an impact for the cause of Christ must have the courage of their convictions. Any dead fish can float downstream; it takes a live one to fight the current. Strong conviction comes from spiritual maturity and knowledge of the Word, and is an essential element in any effective ministry.

Timothy was to be a fighter. Paul put him in Ephesus to "instruct certain men not to teach strange doctrines" (1:3). He was to "fight the good fight" (1:18), and guard what had been entrusted to him (6:20).

Many in the Ephesian congregation lacked the convictions of their pastor. They were compromisers. Such men were not qualified to be elders (3:2), or deacons (3:10), since they were not above reproach. Some of the younger widows were in danger of renegeing on their commitment to Christ (5:11–12). Still others in the congregation had compromised with money and “pierced themselves with many a pang” (6:10).

In contrast, Timothy maintained his convictions, even when that cost him his life. According to tradition, he was martyred in Ephesus some thirty years later for opposing the worship of the goddess Diana. He “[held] fast the beginning of [his] assurance firm until the end” (Heb. 3:14).

THE SALUTATION

Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord. (1:2b)

Grace and peace is the familiar Pauline greeting, appearing in all of his epistles. Only here and in 2 Tim. 1:2 does he add mercy. Timothy would need all three in dealing with the situation at Ephesus. Grace refers to God’s undeserved favor, love, and forgiveness that frees sinners from the consequences of sin. Mercy frees us not from the consequences of sin, but from the misery that accompanies it. Peace is the result of grace and mercy. It refers not only to harmony with God but also to tranquillity of soul. Grace, mercy, and peace are needed throughout the Christian life, not merely at salvation.

Once again Paul links God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord, thus stressing Christ’s deity and equality with the Father. As already noted, part of the heresy at Ephesus involved a rejection of Christ’s deity.

In these two short, seemingly perfunctory verses, Paul reveals his passion for the Ephesian church, a passion kindled during his three years of ministry there. To help Timothy combat the heresy threatening the church, he throws the full weight of his apostolic authority behind him. He also asks God to pour out on Timothy, his true child in the faith, the grace, mercy, and peace he needs to handle the situation. These verses thus serve as a fitting introduction to this important letter.

THE MACARTHUR
NEW TESTAMENT
COMMENTARY

2 TIMOTHY

John MacArthur

MOODY PUBLISHERS/CHICAGO

Contents

CHAPTER	PAGE
Preface	vii
Introduction	ix
1. Motivating a Spiritual Son	1
2. Not Being Ashamed of Christ	9
3. The Elements of a Strong Spiritual Life	35
4. Motives for Sacrificial Ministry	51
5. The Danger of False Teaching	67
6. An Honorable Vessel	85
7. Danger in the Church	103
8. Standing Against Apostasy	125
9. The Work of the Word	137
10. Marks of the Faithful Preacher	165
11. The Triumphant Epitaph of Paul	187
12. Friends and Foes	203
Bibliography	217
Index of Greek Words	219
Index of Scripture	220
Index of Subjects	225

Motivating a Spiritual Son

1

Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, according to the promise of life in Christ Jesus, to Timothy, my beloved son: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

I thank God, whom I serve with a clear conscience the way my forefathers did, as I constantly remember you in my prayers night and day, longing to see you, even as I recall your tears, so that I may be filled with joy. For I am mindful of the sincere faith within you, which first dwelt in your grandmother Lois, and your mother Eunice, and I am sure that it is in you as well. (1:1–5)

As mentioned in the Introduction, Paul's primary instruction to Timothy begins with verse 6 of chapter 1. The first five verses are motivational and constitute a beautiful and moving salutation to the apostle's beloved son in the faith. Yet even these very personal comments reflect principles pertinent not only to Paul's discipling of Timothy but also to Christian parents, Sunday school teachers, youth leaders, pastors, counselors, neighbors, and friends—to any believer who is helping another grow toward maturity in Jesus Christ and effectiveness in ministry.

These six implicit, but easily discernable, principles of motivation are: authority (1:1-2a), altruism (v. 2b), appreciation (v. 3a), appeal (v. 3b), affection (v. 4), and affirmation (v. 5).

AUTHORITY

Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, according to the promise of life in Christ Jesus, to Timothy, my beloved son: (1:1-2a)

The first principle of godly and successful motivation is that of authority, as seen in the opening declaration by Paul that he was an apostle of Christ Jesus. As explained in the Introduction, Paul's apostleship already was well understood by Timothy. It is mentioned here by way of reminder that, despite their close and loving relationship, Paul ranked above Timothy in spiritual authority because he brought the Word of the Lord and was writing in that capacity.

Intimacy does not preclude authority. The relationship of love that parents have with their children does not preclude their authority over their children. A parent-child relationship of love without authority is doomed to tragedy for the entire family. No matter how cordial a working relationship may exist, a business cannot succeed if employees refuse to recognize and submit to the employer's authority over them.

Although they shared a deep friendship, Paul's loving salutation to Timothy carried the full weight of his apostleship. Apostolos (apostle) literally means one who is sent out, "a messenger," as it is sometimes translated (see, e.g., 2 Cor. 8:23; Phil. 2:25). But in the New Testament it more commonly carries the connotation of ambassador, a representative who carries with him the authority of the one he represents. It is used in that sense of the twelve disciples Jesus called during His earthly ministry (Luke 6:13; 9:10) and of Paul, whom Christ called from heaven after His ascension (see Acts 9:3-15; 22:6-14; 26:13-18). The Lord used the verb form of Himself, as "Jesus Christ whom Thou [the Father] hast sent [apostellō]" (John 17:3), and in the book of Hebrews Jesus is called "the Apostle and High Priest of our confession" (3:1).

As an apostle of Jesus Christ, Paul stood in the place of Christ and spoke the Word of Christ, and he did so by the will of God the Almighty Father. Paul writes Timothy not merely as a dear friend but as a divinely commissioned ambassador of God the Father and God the Son. He is not offering brotherly counsel but declaring divine truth with firm authority.

He does so according to, meaning “in conformity to,” the gospel, here called the promise of life in Christ Jesus. Paul’s calling to serve the will of God as a messenger of the Savior was to be discharged by proclaiming the saving good news that those who are dead in sin can find life in Christ Jesus. A favored phrase of Paul was in Christ Jesus, which signified his own and every believer’s union with our Lord and Savior through participation in His death, resurrection, and eternal life. Jesus is Himself “the way, and the truth, and the life” (John 14:6), and He gives the divine promise that “whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life” (John 3:16) and “have it abundantly” (10:10). Those who claim that promise in faith can claim with Paul that Christ “is our life” (Col. 3:4, emphasis added).

Every worthy father deeply desires an unbreakable and rich relationship with his children. In the same way, Paul not only desired but experienced and expressed the intimacy of bonding love that he shared with Timothy, his beloved son. And just as this intimacy did not preclude authority, neither did authority preclude intimacy. As a loving spiritual father, Paul spoke with apostolic authority to his son in the faith. That authority gave Timothy a strong incentive for obedience.

ALTRUISM

Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord. (1:2b)

Although commonly expressed as a greeting, these were not just words but the expression of a genuine desire for God’s best to be reality in the young preacher’s life. Timothy was to be motivated by Paul’s altruism, his unselfish concern for and devotion to the welfare of others. Like every believer, his young protégé was saved by divine grace, the unmerited favor of God’s providing forgiveness and justification. The apostle wanted his son in the faith to continually live in divine mercy, the inexpressible blessing of deliverance from the misery that sin deserves and creates. He also wanted Timothy to continue in full peace of mind and heart, the inner tranquillity produced by divine grace and mercy. He wanted Timothy to have the best that God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord offer to redeemed sinners: grace to cover sin, mercy to overrule misery, and peace to dominate life.

If we want to truly motivate other believers, we must, like Paul, have genuine, loving, and unqualified concern for their full spiritual blessing. In addition to their recognizing our authority under God, we want our brothers and sisters in Christ to know that they are loved by us without reservation. This, too, elicits response.

APPRECIATION

I thank God, whom I serve with a clear conscience the way my forefathers did, (1:3a)

A third principle of godly and successful motivation is appreciation. Not only was Paul a blessing to Timothy, but Timothy was a blessing to Paul. I thank God for you, the apostle assured him, saying in effect, "I am grateful for what God has done for me through you." While Paul was incarcerated in the dark, damp, dangerous, filthy, and stinking Roman prison, he nevertheless rejoiced that the Lord had given him the privilege of knowing and discipling Timothy. He was not bitter or resentful. He had no anger or hatred for those who placed him in prison or for the hardened and brutal criminals who were beside him. He did not lament the unjust and cruel execution he knew soon awaited him. His thoughts were on his sovereign God and on memories of his beloved son in the spirit, with whom he had spent so many blessed hours in mutual service of God and whom he likely would never see again in the flesh. Only the Lord could give such an unbelievably beautiful perspective!

To be appreciated, encouraged, and told that God has wonderful plans for them is a great motivation for young men and women who serve the Lord, and Paul's statement of appreciation for Timothy must have given that young servant of the Lord great confidence. Timothy knew Paul's words were not empty. First of all, he knew that Paul's integrity would not allow him to flatter. Timothy also was well aware that he and Paul had come to know each other intimately in their many years together. They had traveled together, eaten together, ministered together, and doubtless suffered together for the sake of the gospel. At the time this letter was written, Paul doubtless knew Timothy better than any other person.

The appreciation that Paul spoke from his own heart must therefore have profoundly touched Timothy and placed on him a great sense of responsibility to live up to the high expectations of his spiritual mentor. The young disciple knew that this dear friend and peerless saint in the cause of Christ was facing imminent death. Yet, even during his last painful and uncertain hours, he thanked God and held up before Him a young pastor who, although incomparably trained in the gospel, had yet to fully prove himself in the difficult areas of the Lord's service.

In the midst of unimaginable physical misery, Paul not only continued to praise God but did so with deep gratitude from a guiltless mind and heart. With full conviction and truthfulness he could testify, "I serve the Lord and continually stand before Him with a clear conscience the way my forefathers did." Latreō (serve) was sometimes used of godly worship or even priestly service. Standing falsely accused by the Jewish leaders before Felix, the Roman governor in Caesarea, Paul said, “According to the Way which they call a sect I do serve [latreuō] the God of our fathers” (Acts 24:14). Speaking of true children of God, whether Jew or Gentile, Paul assured the Philippian believers: “We are the true circumcision, who worship [latreuō] in the Spirit of God and glory in Christ Jesus and put no confidence in the flesh” (Phil. 3:3).

As the aging apostle stood near death, he could testify that his conscience did not accuse or condemn him. His guilt was forgiven, and his devotion was undivided. “After careful self-examination,” he said, in effect, “I can say with sincerity that, although I am not perfect, I am living in holiness before the Lord.” He wanted Timothy to have no doubt that he endured his present physical afflictions, as he had countless others, because of his unswerving faithfulness to the Lord, not as a consequence of unfaithful, ungodly living.

Although even the most spiritual believer cannot know his own heart with complete certainty or understanding, it not only is possible but expected that, like Paul, every Christian have a clear conscience. This was a vital matter to Paul, who often refers to his conscience. When defending himself against the lying attacks he experienced in Corinth, he responded with an appeal to the highest human court, the conscience. His defense was: “For our proud confidence is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in holiness and godly sincerity, not in fleshly wisdom but in the grace of God, we have conducted ourselves in the world, and especially toward you” (2 Cor. 1:12; cf. Acts 23:1).

In his first letter to Timothy he wrote, “The goal of our instruction is love from a pure heart and a good conscience and a sincere faith” (1 Tim. 1:5), and we are to hold “to the mystery of the faith with a clear conscience” (3:9). In that same epistle he said that “the Spirit explicitly says that in later times some will fall away from the faith, paying attention to deceitful spirits and doctrines of demons, by means of the hypocrisy of liars seared in their own conscience as with a branding iron” (4:1–2). To continually reject God’s truth causes the conscience to become progressively less sensitive to sin, as if covered with layers of unspiritual scar tissue. Paul’s conscience was very clear and very sensitive, and he responded readily to its convicting voice.

Paul does not explain whom he meant by forefathers, but he obviously was speaking of godly men who had lived in former times. Unlike Timothy, Paul had no godly heritage from his immediate family. He had an impressive religious heritage, but he utterly discounted that as so much rubbish (Phil. 3:4–8). It therefore seems more probable that he was referring to the patriarchs, prophets, and other Old Testament saints. It is also possible that he had in mind the other apostles and the many other godly believers in the early church who preceded him in faith.

APPEAL

as I constantly remember you in my prayers night and day, (1:3b)

A fourth element of motivation was Paul's constant appeal to the Lord on Timothy's behalf. It is hard to imagine the strength and encouragement that Paul's intercession gave to his young friend as he ministered in Ephesus and other parts of Asia Minor without Paul's companionship.

The adverb adialeiptōs (constantly) refers to that which is unceasing, without interruption. We can be sure that Paul's saying I constantly remember you was not hyperbole. The apostle had used the same word in exhorting Thessalonian believers to "pray without ceasing" (1 Thess. 5:17, emphasis added), and he was himself accustomed to doing no less. He already had assured those believers of his unceasing prayers and concern for them (1:2–3). Using the same word, he assured the church at Rome that "God, whom I serve in my spirit in the preaching of the gospel of His Son, is my witness as to how unceasingly I make mention of you, always in my prayers" (Rom. 1:9–10, emphasis added). He gave similar assurance to believers in Corinth (1 Cor. 1:4), in Philippi (Phil. 1:3–4), in Colossae (Col. 1:3), and to his dear friend Philemon (Philem. 4).

Prayers is from deēsis, which in the New Testament always carries the idea of genuine entreaty and supplication before God. It was used by the angel who assured the godly father of John the Baptist, "Do not be afraid, Zacharias, for your petition [deēsis] has been heard, and your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son, and you will give him the name John" (Luke 1:13). Later in that gospel the word is used of the disciples of John the Baptist, who were said to "often fast and offer prayers" (5:33). It was used by Paul of his "prayer to God" for the salvation of his fellow Israelites (Rom. 10:1) and by James of "the effective prayer of a righteous man [which] can accomplish much" (James 5:16).

At first glance, the reference to night and day seems redundant and somewhat inappropriate. It seems redundant because, by definition, constantly means around-the-clock, and inappropriate because it is likely that Paul and his fellow prisoners could not distinguish one hour from another in that dungeon. But he doubtless used the phrase night and day in the way it is often used today, as a figure of speech expressing continuity. He simply wanted to reinforce his devotion to Timothy.

There is no better way to motivate other believers to consider their accountability to be faithful and to move their hearts in service of Christ than to continually hold them up before the Lord in prayer—and to tell them of it.

AFFECTION

longing to see you, even as I recall your tears, so that I may be filled with joy. (1:4)

A fifth principle for motivating other believers, especially those we may be discipling, is to love them and to express genuine affection for them. Paul greatly missed Timothy's companionship and was longing to see him. Longing is from epipotheō, a verb denoting intense desire or yearning for. Later in the letter he reflects the same aching desire, imploring Timothy, "Make every effort to come to me soon" (4:9), and "When you come bring the cloak which I left at Troas with Carpus . . . [and] make every effort to come before winter" (vv. 13, 21).

I recall your tears, the apostle says, perhaps referring to their time of last parting, following a brief visit to Ephesus sometime after writing his first letter to Timothy and before he was arrested at Nicopolis and taken prisoner to Rome. Paul had a similar bond with the elders in Ephesus. When they came out to meet him on the beach near Miletus, "he knelt down and prayed with them all. And they began to weep aloud and embraced Paul, and repeatedly kissed him, grieving especially over the word which he had spoken, that they should see his face no more" (Acts 20:36–38).

Although he doubtless realized he might never see Timothy again, even the remote prospect of such a reunion filled Paul with joy. Knowing the apostle's deep love and yearning to see him again surely filled Timothy with joy as well and inspired still greater commitment to follow in the footsteps of his beloved teacher and friend.

AFFIRMATION

For I am mindful of the sincere faith within you, which first dwelt in your grandmother Lois, and your mother Eunice, and I am sure that it is in you as well. (1:5)

The final principle of motivation Paul alludes to is that of affirmation. In the two previous verses Paul mentions his remembering Timothy in prayer and recalling his tears. Now again he reflects on their intimate association, this time being mindful of the sincere faith within Timothy.

Anupokritos (sincere) is a compound word, composed of a negative prefix attached to hupokritēs, from which we get the obviously related English word hypocrite. Timothy's faith was completely genuine, unhypocritical, without pretense or deceit. In his previous letter to Timothy, Paul had written, "The goal of our instruction is love from a pure heart and a good conscience and a sincere [anupokritos] faith" (1 Tim. 1:5). In his second letter to the church at Corinth, Paul used the term to describe his "genuine love" (2 Cor. 6:6, emphasis added). Peter used it in his admonition to all believers scattered throughout the Roman Empire: "Since you have in obedience to the truth purified your souls for a sincere love of the brethren, fervently love one another from the heart" (1 Peter 1:22, emphasis added). James used it as the final qualification of "the wisdom from above [which] is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, reasonable, full of mercy and good fruits, unwavering, without hypocrisy" (James 3:17, emphasis added).

Timothy had a heritage of sincere faith within [him], which first dwelt in [his] grandmother Lois, and [his] mother Eunice. The reference to Lois and Eunice suggests that Paul knew those women personally and perhaps was instrumental, along with Barnabas, in winning them to Christ during his first missionary journey, which had taken him through Timothy's home area of Galatia (see Acts 13:13–14:21). They probably were Jewish believers under the Old Covenant who immediately received Jesus as their Messiah, Savior, and Lord when they first heard the gospel from the lips of Paul. By the time of Paul's second journey, the women had led their grandson and son to the Lord, and he already had become "well spoken of by the brethren who were in Lystra and Iconium" (Acts 16:2). Timothy was Paul's indirect son in the faith who had come to belief through the witness of his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice, who had been led to faith directly by the apostle. Through them, he had "from childhood . . . known the sacred writings which are able to give [him] the wisdom that leads to salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 3:15).

Some years ago I was involved in a discussion regarding the choice of a man to take up the leadership of a well-known Christian organization. In looking over the list of prospects, I commented that it was interesting that every one of those men had a godly pastor for a father. The Lord has, of course, raised up many faithful leaders, including Paul, from ungodly and even godless families. But a high percentage of the great men throughout church history have come from godly homes. Timothy's father was an unbelieving Gentile (Acts 16:3), but his mother and grandmother were believers of great godliness. Paul commends them for the immense influence for good they had on Timothy and for the sincere faith that the apostle was sure to be in Timothy as well.